IMPORTANT MATCH INFORMATION: Concussion Guidance for the Recreational Game

The ECB ACO recently provided written guidance to umpires in the recreational game as to what action to take following a head strike. We would ask club and player umpires to adopt the same approach.

Application of Law in the case of a head strike in the recreational game.

- If the ball strikes a player on the head, irrespective of whether they are wearing a helmet, then a dead ball should be called immediately. Either umpire can do this.
- The dead ball should be called, irrespective of the apparent significance of the force with which the ball strikes the player e.g. even if it is what might ordinarily be deemed a 'slight or glancing deflection'.

- Irrespective of when a dead ball is called (an umpire might, on occasion, not call it immediately):
 - No runs may be scored from the moment the head strike occurs e.g. if, after a strike to the batter's head, the batters 'complete' a run before dead ball is called, then that run does not count.
 - Neither batter can be dismissed following a head strike e.g. if the ball strikes a fielder's head, having been hit by a batter, and is then caught, then the batter is not out.

Note that the above would apply if a collision of heads would take place with fielders as well as head strikes from a delivery.
